

Please do not implement any proposal that would override the protection provided by Indiana's Telephone Privacy Act. The benefits of this Act have been significant in that only certain types of contacts may be made to my home by the telephone service for which I pay and for the first time have been given control over who may contact me. Additionally, my parents, who are in their 70s, were confused many times by the solicitors, but are now protected and as their children we do not have to worry about them providing confidential information that may be used to their detriment to telemarketers.
